1. West Usumchin airfield, two kilometers north of West Usumchin (117-40, 44-31), was originally a natural plain which was built into an airfield by the Tokumo Kikan. The Bargastai Gol (Willow River) runs about one kilometer east of the airfield. It is an entwining river and willow trees grow on both sides to a height of twelve to fifteen feet. East of the river is a desert.
2. The airfield is only 500 meters square with a hardened flour-like sand surface sustaining a sparse growth of grass. Rain does not affect the airfield and puddles do not form. During the winter months, snow is blown from the hill west of the airfield and piles up on the airfield.
3. There are no facilities at the field.
